

BIG SCREEN CLASSICS

Au hasard Balthazar

Au hasard Balthazar

Director: Robert Bresson

Production Companies: Parc Film, Argos-Films,

Atmos-Films, Svensk Filmindustri,
Svenska Filminstitutet

Associate Producer: Mag Bodard

Production Manager: Philippe Dussart

Assistant Production Managers: Michel Choquet, René Pascal

Location Manager: Maurice Jumeau

Assistant Directors: Jacques Kébadian,

Sven Frostenson, Claude Miller

Script Supervisor: Geneviève Cortier

Screenplay: Robert Bresson

Director of Photography: Ghislain Cloquet

Camera Operator: Jean Chiabaut

Assistant Operator: Emmanuel Machuel

Supervising Editor: Raymond Lamy

Editor: Geneviève Billo

Art Director: Pierre Charbonnier

Set Decorator: Dominique Ribeyrolles

Props: Jean Catala

Dresser: Guy Renault

Sonate No 20 by Franz Schubert performed on piano by: Jean-Joël Barbier

Jazz/Songs: Jean Wiener

Sound Engineers: Antoine Archimbaud,

Jacques Carrère

Cast:

Anne Wiazemsky (Marie)

Walter Green (Jacques)

François Lafarge (Gérard)

Jean-Claude Guilbert (Arnold)

Philippe Asselin (schoolteacher)

Pierre Klossowsky (the miser)

Nathalie Joyaut (Marie's mother)

Marie-Claire Frémont (the baker's wife)

Jean-Joël Barbier (le doyen)

Guy Renault

Jean Rémignard (the notary)

Guy Bréjac (the vet)

Mylène Weyerqans (the nurse)

Jacques Sorbets (police captain)

François Sullerot (the baker)

Henri Fraisse

Gilles Sandier

Dominique Moune

Tord Paag (Louis)

René Bazart

Pascale Savornin

Isabelle Petit

Roger Fjellstrom (Gérard's friend)

Isabelle de Winter

Sven Frostenson (Gérard's friend)

José Ruiz Pernias

Rémy Brozeck (Marcel) *

France/Sweden 1966

95 mins

Digital 4K

* Uncredited

+ intro by Lou Thomas, BFI Digital Production Editor and film critic (Wednesday 31 July only)

SPOILER WARNING The following notes give away some of the plot.

Robert Bresson drafted the rules of a new cinema and realised them in Au hasard Balthazar, his masterpiece. This seemingly aloof, cold film, inspired by a passage in Dostoevsky's 1868 novel The Idiot, burns with a yearning for justice and beauty. Bresson's disciplined portraiture of a donkey and the way of life in the French countryside is a lesson in seeing the world anew through the cinema and noticing the potential that endeavour contains.

Kaya Genc, Sight and Sound, Winter 2022-23

Contemporary reviews

After the impurities and simplifications of Proces de Jeanne d'Arc, Au hasard Balthazar is a welcome return to form for Bresson, perhaps his greatest film to date, certainly his most complex. The religious references are there for the asking – Balthazar's name, Marie's name, the baptism in the stable, the parade of the seven deadly sins, and so on. But, as Bresson himself has suggested, these analogies are not merely guide-points to a simple Christian parable: they are rather echoes, designed to give depth and resonance to what one might call his study of free will and the immutability of suffering. Marie chooses, Balthazar does not; Marie acts, Balthazar is acted upon; but they both end up in misery and despair (though with that indefinable breath of grace hovering near them) in the harsh world of today, which is much more present than in any other Bresson film, with its scooters, transistors, cars, juke-boxes and unthinking violence.

From the moment when Marie is called to witness the wonder of the infant Balthazar, to the twin finales when Marie crouches naked in the corner of an empty room and Balthazar lies dying amid a flock of sheep on the mountainside, their destinies are inextricably linked, mysteriously merging for a moment in the wonderful, almost mystical scene where she garlands his head with flowers and secretly places a kiss on his muzzle. Marie descending, Balthazar ('C'est un saint') ascending. Marie, longing to be elsewhere and other than she is, torn between the known security of Jacques and the unknown excitement of Gérard, appears as a lost soul, wandering tethered to a fixed point which is Balthazar, and accompanied by the cry of 'Marie ... Marie' which echoes like a motif throughout.

But the paradox of the film is that, physically speaking, it is actually Balthazar who wanders from adventure to adventure, while Marie remains exactly where she is; spiritually, however, their roles are reversed. The two of them are inscribed within a circle, evoked by Bresson in the movement of his film, which not only begins and ends with Balthazar coming full circle in his life, but constantly rounds on itself (Balthazar returning home after his escape and walking round the stable building before entering his stall; the reiterated cry of 'Marie, Marie, viens voir!'; Gérard's pursuit of Marie round Balthazar, etc.). This movement is continued in Bresson's style, a delicate and perfectly timed mechanism with each shot and sequence linking with the next to conjure not only something unspoken, but something already experienced. It is almost impossible to describe a shot or a scene out of context without falsifying it hopelessly: in the space available here, one can only admire.

BECOME A BFI MEMBER

Enjoy a great package of film benefits including priority booking at BFI Southbank and BFI Festivals. Join today at bfi.org.uk/join

BIG SCREEN CLASSICS

Wild Strawberries Smultronstället

Mon 1 Jul 11:50; Tue 9 Jul 20:50; Sun 21 Jul 14:20;
Tue 30 Jul 18:20

Point Blank

Tue 2 Jul 12:20; Wed 17 Jul 18:10 (+ intro by Geoff Andrew, Programmer-at-Large); Sat 27 Jul 18:30

Pierrot le fou

Tue 2 Jul 18:10; Fri 12 Jul 20:40; Mon 15 Jul 12:10;
Mon 29 Jul 20:45

Taxi Driver

Wed 3 Jul 17:50 (+ intro by Chantelle Lavel Boyea, BFI Assistant Curator of Television); Sat 13 Jul
18:00; Tue 16 Jul 12:15; Tue 23 Jul 12:20

The Passenger Professione: reporter

Thu 4 Jul 20:40; Sat 6 Jul 12:00; Mon 15 Jul 18:10;
Fri 19 Jul 12:20

Au hasard Balthazar

Fri 5 Jul 12:20; Wed 10 Jul 12:20; Fri 19 Jul 20:45;
Wed 31 Jul 18:10 (+ intro)

The English Patient

Sat 6 Jul 17:15; Sun 21 Jul 19:20

The Discreet Charm of the Bourgeoisie Le

Charme discret de la bourgeoisie
Sun 7 Jul 17:10; Thu 11 Jul 12:20; Sat 20 Jul 16:10

Theorem Teorema

Mon 8 Jul 12:20; Wed 10 Jul 18:15 (+ intro); Wed 17
Jul 12:30; Sun 28 Jul 20:30

Gloria

Sat 13 Jul 13:10; Tue 16 Jul 20:35; Sat 20 Jul
13:30; Tue 30 Jul 20:30

Unforgiven

Sun 14 Jul 19:50; Tue 23 Jul 20:30; Thu 25 Jul
14:40

Bitter Victory

Thu 18 Jul 20:45; Sun 28 Jul 12:00

Daughters of the Dust

Mon 22 Jul 12:20; Wed 24 Jul 18:10 (+ intro by Arike Oke, Executive Director of Knowledge,
Learning and Collections); Sat 27 Jul 20:45

F for Fake

Mon 22 Jul 18:20; Wed 24 Jul 12:40; Fri 26 Jul 20:50

SIGHT AND SOUND

Never miss an issue with Sight and Sound,
the BFI's internationally renowned film magazine.
Subscribe from just £25*

* Price based on a 6-month print subscription (UK only). More info: sightandsoundsubs.bfi.org.uk

BFI PLAYER

We are always open online on BFI Player where you can watch the best new, cult & classic cinema on demand. Showcasing hand-picked landmark British and independent titles, films are available to watch in three distinct ways: Subscription, Rentals & Free to view.

See something different today on player.bfi.org.uk

Join the BFI mailing list for regular programme updates. Not yet registered? Create a new account at www.bfi.org.uk/signup

Admire, too, Bresson's extraordinary use of non-actors. There is a whole treatise to be written on Bresson's use of eyes in this film, starting on the one hand with the unwinking stares, full of secret knowledge and complicity, which pass between Balthazar and the animals in the circus; and on the other, the veiled secrecy of the humans – except Gérard, who stares boldly straight at Marie and at the camera – as they cast their eyes downwards to place a question mark to their utterances.

Monthly Film Bulletin, January 1967

The world changes, but not Bresson. Au hasard Balthazar is his greatest and most Bressonian film, but not merely because it echoes the arrogance of Les Anges du péché, the waterfall of Les Dames du Bois de Boulogne, the letter reading of Le Journal d'un curé de campagne, the gear-lever of Un condamné à mort, the hands of Pickpocket, the naked feet of Jeanne d'Arc. It is great because in the harmonies and dissonances between the characters (Marie in particular) and the donkey, Balthazar, and between successive images, between images and soundtrack, there is a dynamic exchange reaching to the limits of possibility whereby each is enriched, transformed by the contact. Motion and stasis, repetition and fulfilment, transition, resonance of sequence against sequence, reality against fantasy, flesh against spirit, sight against sound: Bresson's style is in perfect working order, a well-oiled machine set to reveal the secret, inner movement he cherishes.

Assuming his audience to be adult, and refusing to do their work for them, Bresson does not explain his film or stress its few scattered keys. The principal themes to be orchestrated throughout the film are introduced right from the beginning. We see a foal suckled by its mother, a child's caressing hands, a strange baptism in the salt of wisdom, children playing in the straw, a bench, a swing, the death of a little girl, a carriage laden with luggage; a murmured phrase, 'Till next year!' which an irony of fate renders meaningless as soon as it is uttered (the father has no intention of coming back). Then a swift transition: blows raining on the donkey, the donkey being shod. After the petting, the years of work and hardship, the sand to be carted, the fields to be ploughed. The sequence ends on an image of the donkey, injustice and hypocrisy already lashing him like blows from a whip.

Already Bresson has introduced the main themes from his concerto for donkey and orchestra. The carriage represents departure and escape (there are numerous attempts, successful, unsuccessful, or simply projected); the bench and the swing, respectively, represent stability (marriage, family, wealth – the Jacques theme) and movement, excitement, risk (carnal love, truancy, perdition – the theme of Gérard, Arnold, the old miser). The whole film hangs hesitating in a balance between two poles: between good and evil, richness and poverty, honesty and dishonesty, justice and injustice, love and hatred, novelty and tradition, sacred and profane love, the folly of the modern world and the wisdom of a return to the simple life, to the soft, shadowy hillside landscapes which Bresson has portrayed with the nuanced delicacy of a Corot.

In a cinema still struggling to find expression, Bresson's work soars like the spire of a cathedral. Yielding nothing, accepting no compromise, he makes his own grace – and his own isolation. After Balthazar, we know that only Bresson can make us sense the ineffable, see the invisible, touch the intangible.

Gilles Jacob, Sight and Sound, Winter 1966-67